

A Spectacle for Perjurers,

27. Die Nouemb. 1589.

Iohn Iones of the Parrish of S. Sepulchres in London Gentleman, aged fortie yeeres and aboue, made oath that he was present about two yeeres past, at the signe of the George in Yorke, when M. Christopher Crosbitt Gentleman, did lend vnto M. Richard Swale Doctor of the Ciuill Law, the Sum of two hundred pounds in Angell, with which money the saide M. Swale did then say he would buy certain Land in Yorkshire, of the value of ~~unum~~ pounds. And he then heard M. Swale promise the said M. Crosbitt, that the same land should be assured to him and his Heires, vntill the said money repaid him. And where in effect this deponent now remembreth not touching that matter, sauing that he thinketh in his conscience, that the said M. Crosbitt had neither the said land assured him, nor the said moneye paid him back again.

{ The originall hereof remaineth with M. Doctor }
{ Swale: being wilfully false in all points. }

Thus subscribed. I. I.

Note, that (throughe the like wilfull perjury of this Iones and Bolton the Cutpurse) Fulwood and Doughtie were before that tyme condemned in the Star Chamber (as it strangely happened) of conspiracie, at the sute of Brokismoth, otherwise called Rogecrosse Painter, onelye so; that they (amongst others) were the meanes that the same Brokismoth was iustly condempned, and burnde in the hand at Newgate for two notable felonies. By which like perjuries, any man may be condemned in any cause whatsoever.

God amend that's amisse,
Better make a new world, then amend this.

Flye Falshood. Fulwood.
